*Estimates as per Employment Market Information Programme of Directorate Generalof Employment & Training, Ministry of Labour & Employment.

 Estimates based on usual status approach Totals may not tally due to rounding off.

(b) Social security for the workers in the organised sector is provided through the implementation of various Acts such as the Employees' State Insurance Act, 1948, the Employees' Provident Funds & Miscellaneous Provisions Act, 1952 (Separate provident fund legislations exist for workers employed in Coal mines and tea plantations in the state of Assam and for seamen), the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923, the Maternity Benefit Act, 1961, the Payment of Gratuity Act, 1972. For the unorganised sector workers, the Government has set up five welfare funds to provide social security to the specified unorganised workers such as beedi workers, cine workers and certain non-coal mine workers to provide health care, housing, educational assistance for children, drinking water etc. These schemes are in addition to the poverty alleviation schemes/employment generation programmes being implemented by the Government. The Janshree Bima Yojana provide life insurance protection to the rural and urban poor persons including unorganised workers who are below and marginally above proverty line. Government has launched Universal Health Insurance Scheme, which will amongst others cover the unorganized workers also. Further, social protection to the unorganized workers is also available under the National Social Assistance Programme (NSAP).

(c) and (d) In the Mid Term Appraisal of Tenth Five Year Plan (2002-07) Document, it is suggested that State Government should enact legislation for the welfare of unorganised workers, which should clearly identify the resources to be raised, benefits to be given as well as the institutional mechanism. The Government should provide welfare services to the unorganised workers such as compensation for accident at work, death, and old age pension in the 'risk cover mode' as distinct from the 'direct ex-gratia payments'.
